14:30-16:00 EU Policy Lab session – Arctic Youth Dialogue

Storytelling is a captivating way of raising awareness. And the Arctic has a wealth of stories to tell, particularly from the Arctic youth.

Attention is growing on the importance of including of young people in decision-making on the Arctic. However, challenges may arise from structural or social barriers to youth participation, but there may be also some reluctance or lack of desire to participate by young persons. In this informal and interactive session, we explore the challenges that hinder wider participation in Arctic decision-making across generations by asking Indigenous youth what values they bring to the Arctic table, what challenges are there when engaging in decision-making, and what are the options for improving the situation.

We will explore these questions asking young Indigenous activists, politicians, students and entrepreneurs about stories related to the values that drive them and their experiences and of involvement in decision-making about governing, influencing, changing, maintaining and understanding the Arctic. Join this EU Policy Lab to deepen your understanding of the Arctic!
